62. ITEM: Discussion and action directing the City Attorney, in collaboration with the City Manager as necessary and with the assistance of El Paso Water Public Service Board General Counsel as offered, to prepare and present for City Council consideration an ordinance requiring that any commercial solicitation distributed within the City of El Paso related to water quality, water safety, water testing, water treatment, water filtration, or any service that represents, directly or indirectly, that it evaluates, affects, or improves water quality, safety, or compliance with public health standards include a clear and conspicuous disclosure identifying the business responsible for the solicitation and stating that the business is not affiliated with or endorsed by any government agency or public utility. For purposes of this ordinance, “commercial solicitation” means any written, printed, digital, or in-person communication primarily intended to advertise, market, or sell a product or service to residents.

The proposed ordinance shall, at a minimum:

- 1) Require that the disclosure include language stating substantially the following: “This is an advertisement for a product or service by [Company Name]. This business is not affiliated with or endorsed by any government agency or public utility provider.” The ordinance may allow for substantially similar language that conveys the same meaning.
- 2) Require that the disclosure also include:
 - (a) the full legal name of the business responsible for the solicitation;
 - (b) any assumed name or “doing business as” (DBA) name used in the solicitation;
 - (c) the business’s physical or mailing address; and
 - (d) a valid business contact method, which shall include a telephone number or email address through which the business can be directly contacted by the recipient; a website alone shall not satisfy this requirement.

The information provided must be sufficient to reasonably identify and contact the responsible party and shall not be false, misleading, or designed to obscure the identity of the business.

- 3) Require that the disclosure be clear and conspicuous, printed in a font size no smaller than the primary body text of the solicitation; in a contrasting color for legibility; and placed prominently on the face of any flyer, mailer, door hanger, or other written, printed, or digital solicitation, or, for digital formats, at the beginning of the communication or in a location immediately visible to the recipient without requiring scrolling or interaction.

- 4) Require that the disclosure appear in every language used in the solicitation. The ordinance shall include a Spanish-language version of the disclosure as guidance, such as: “Este es un anuncio de un producto o servicio de [Nombre de la empresa]. Esta empresa no está afiliada ni respaldada por ninguna agencia gubernamental ni proveedor de servicios públicos.” The ordinance shall further require that, when any language other than English appears in the solicitation, the disclosure must also appear in that language in a correct and clear translation and be equally clear and conspicuous as the English version.

- 5) Apply only to commercial solicitations and not to communications issued by:

- (a) a governmental entity;
 - (b) a public utility provider authorized to operate within the City; or
 - (c) a contractor or partner acting on behalf of such an entity, provided the communication clearly identifies that relationship.

- 6) Establish that a person commits a violation if they distribute a commercial solicitation that fails to include the required disclosure, regardless of intent.

- 7) Establish a graduated enforcement framework focused on compliance, including (as applicable):

- (a) an initial written notice and opportunity to cure;

- (b) civil and administrative penalties for subsequent violations;
 - (c) limited Class C misdemeanor enforcement only in cases involving intentional or knowing misrepresentation of affiliation with a government agency or public utility, or repeated and willful violations following written notice, opportunity to cure, and civil or administrative enforcement.
- 8) Include in the recitals findings related to consumer protection, prevention of deceptive or misleading practices, protection of vulnerable residents, and the City's interest in ensuring residents can clearly distinguish official communications from private commercial solicitations.

Transcript of Rep. Canales's Comments on Item numbers 23, 64, and 67

FIRST COMMENTS

Representative Canales: Thank you, Mayor.

I want to take a step back first and talk about where we are today on this issue, because the conversation has evolved a lot over the past few months.

This is no longer in my opinion just a question of whether a particular technology can help solve crimes. I think we can all acknowledge that tools like automated license plate readers can be effective in certain contexts at solving crimes. Your numbers show that there have been some cases where it's been useful.

The question in front of us now is whether a system like this—one that is networked, national in scope, and reach, and constantly evolving—can actually be governed at the local level in the way that we expect.

Over the last several months, the concerns around that question have in my opinion not been resolved and I think they've become more abundant.

There are a few areas where those concerns have sharpened since we last heard about Flock.

The first area is local control. When a system operates across jurisdictions, across states, and across agencies, local policy doesn't necessarily determine how data is ultimately used. We can adopt safeguards here in El Paso. We can set rules here. But once data enters a broader network, access pathways expand in ways that I think are not always visible or fully controllable from the local level.

That is the reality of how these systems function. Our safeguards rely almost entirely on Flock being trustworthy and cooperative with us, and their motivations being perfectly aligned with our motivations. So many of the incidents that I discussed at the beginning of last month I think show that this isn't the case.

Second area is contracts and data rights.

Since our discussions last month, more information has come to light largely thanks to the American Civil Liberties Union about how vendor terms can change over time. Flock in late February updated their terms of service, including the following changes:

On the sale of data. Flock’s previous Terms & Conditions stated flatly, “Flock does not own and shall not sell Customer Data.” They removed that, that information is now absent from their Terms & Conditions.

On control over data. The new license, while granting formal legal “ownership” of data to the customer, now grants the company “the exclusive right to determine and control the method, timing, format, and medium” of access to the data that belongs to the customer.

On a perpetual license. The Terms & Conditions now add a “perpetual” right for Flock to use customer data to “support and improve” its services — allowing the company to keep using surveillance data even after a city or other customer has terminated its relationship with Flock and may no longer have access to that data itself. Flock’s right to use that data has no expiration date anymore.

On these last two, here is the exact language. This is from our terms and conditions document from our agreement with Flock. “Customer hereby grants to Flock a limited, non-exclusive, royalty-free, irrevocable, perpetual, worldwide license to (a) use and disclose Customer Data to provide the Flock Services; and (b) use Customer Data to support and improve Flock’s products and services. Customer Data will be available for Authorized End Users to access and download via the Web Interface during the applicable Retention Period. For clarity, Flock retains the exclusive right to determine and control the method, timing, format, and medium of such access or delivery, and is not obligated to provide Customer Data in any alternative form, format, or transmission method outside of the Web Interface.” To me doesn’t sound like ownership or control of the data by us.

The previous policy, dated November 2025, read as follows:

“LPR data gathered by the Flock Safety system on behalf of Flock Safety customers is owned by the customer. Customers choose whether to share LPR data with other customers in accordance with their laws and policies. Flock Safety will not: Sell, publish, exchange, or disclose customer’s LPR data for commercial purposes. Disclose or publish LPR data without authorization, unless required by law. Disseminate LPR data to persons not authorized to access or use the information.”

To me, this raises the question: Why the change on disclosure? And are we just okay with that?

On liability, termination, and arbitration provisions. The new Terms & Conditions also expand Flock’s protections against liability for willful misconduct or gross negligence by their own personnel, potentially shifting the costs of defending against data breaches and other failures from the company to the customers.

Again, these changes raise a lot of questions for me. How long have we been aware of these changes? Did we know they were coming before February? Was Flock able to make these changes unilaterally? Have we had a conversation with Flock about them, or did we just accept them? Did our legal department review the changes to the Terms & Conditions beforehand?

I think these changes raise a really basic governance question which is what exactly are we agreeing to, and how stable are those terms over time? How can we claim to control the data if we grant Flock the ability to use it forever and to govern our access to it. Flock has just evolved so rapidly and what we approve in participation in today may not be the same system that exists a year from now, but with our data still in perpetual use by the company even if their entire business model or their safeguards change. Very rarely in U.S. history have those going against the guidance of the ACLU been on the correct side of an issue and this causes me great concern.

Third area is reliability. I think deserves far more attention than it's gotten.

There's a recent case out of Colorado where an individual, Kyle Dausman, has been repeatedly stopped by law enforcement because a Flock system flagged his vehicle as being associated with an active warrant. He does not have an active warrant.

According to the gentleman himself and the reporting on the issue, it appears to stem from a database or entry error where there was confusion between zeros and O's in inputting a warrant into the system. But once that error entered the system it hasn't stayed contained. Each time his vehicle passes a Flock camera, it triggers an alert, and officers in whatever jurisdiction he is in fully acting in good faith continue to stop him again and again and again and his local department has already removed the flag locally, but they say they can't remove it from the entire system. the state of Colorado points to the town, the town points to the state of Colorado, both of them point at Flock, and no one's been able to solve the problem. So, what you have is not just a onetime mistake it's a system that's repeatedly reinforcing that mistake again and again, and this poor man isn't able to live his life because every single time he drives, he gets pulled over.

I think that's a really different kind of risk than misuse that I have talked about before. It's what happens when the system itself is wrong. I think it shows that a data error can become a series of unnecessary police encounters. It's a waste of this gentleman's time. It's a waste of those officer's time and that error doesn't stay local in a networked system like this. That man could drive his vehicle anywhere in the United States and he will have the exact same result because Flock you know any jurisdiction that's using Flock will have the same result.

The fourth area is system security and integrity. There has been growing concern—not just in advocacy circles, but also among many local governments—about the security of these systems.

There have continued to be numerous instances of unauthorized access to camera feeds. We heard about some of them earlier from Flock employees themselves who among other feeds were watching feeds of children's gymnastics classes. I think we've seen these failures in other places many times the same problem popping up in multiple cities and states. Frankly I think it's naive to think that we're somehow different and isolated from the problems that have been discovered in other places that have similar safeguards to what we have in place.

The fifth area and this is particularly important in our context is community trust.

El Paso is a city on the border and on the state line. Movement across jurisdictions is really a normal part of our daily life here in El Paso. Many families are mixed-status. Many residents have concerns about how data might be shared, interpreted, or accessed beyond our control.

Whether those concerns are always realized in practice or not, they affect how people interact with government, and that has real consequences for us. It affects whether people report crimes. It affects cooperation with law enforcement. It affects whether people feel safe coming forward when something goes wrong.

So, is not only a technical question. It's a question about the relationship between the community and the institutions that serve the community. What good is it to have a tool to solve a crime if that crime never gets reported in the first place because people are afraid.

And then the sixth area is kind of the broader trajectory.

Over the past couple of months, the national conversation has moved toward I think more scrutiny. Cities and other jurisdictions are asking more questions. Many have paused their renewals and stepped back from contracts and legislatures are now beginning to engage, and there is a lot more attention on how these systems are governed.

So, it's not enough just to point out the potential benefits. I think it's worth it to have the conversations about all of these issues, especially when we see Flock.

lock making what seem to be kind of unilateral changes to the way that we interact with them.

Thank you Mayor.

SECOND COMMENTS

As I started with before, there are potential benefits to Flock. I don't dispute that. But I just don't think it's enough to point to potential benefits. We have to decide if this is the right fit for our community and council, I'd ask that we deny this. For me the answer is still no. This is an extreme example but if we had licensed new software and hardware to run our traffic management system, our traffic lights, and all across the country, we saw repeat failures of the same system causing crashes and outages of other cities systems and employees of the company tampering with the lights and changing the signal timing to benefit their own commutes and the commutes of their families and it led to entire cities and states banning the use of that software. I don't think we would be considering a renewal of that no matter how beneficial it had been to us seeing the issues at other places.

To me we're in a similar situation with Flock, not because the technology has no value, but because of the governance challenges and the data control issues and the reliability concerns and the implications for community trust. I just think that those outweigh the benefits that have been demonstrated so far. And again, you have demonstrated some benefits, and we heard some specific cases where flock has been successfully used. I just think until we address those issues clearly that continued participation in a system like this isn't prudent for us. There's still so many outstanding questions and issues that we see in other places. So now I'll say I have some questions about process as well.

I have been told multiple times, and the public has been told, that the contract with Flock was expiring in May or possibly June and that the Council would vote at that time on a renewal. I now understand, based on what I was told only today during our lunch break that this is it. If this item is approved today then the contract with Flock will be renewed administratively through the buyboard with the purchasing collaborative and it won't come back to the council for approval at a later date. Ms. Mack, I genuinely appreciate your public apology and I know that it wasn't intentional on your part, but from a process standpoint, it's just difficult for me to accept this level of information sharing. It's now the second time on this very issue where the information shared with us and with the public has not been clear or correct.

I also have a concern about what I have heard from a constituent about a response to their open records request, through which they requested the City's agreement with Flock. The response they received read as follows:

"Your request, received 03/26/2026, has been forwarded to me and is being treated as a request for records under the Texas Public Information Act. You requested the following information:

"...Contract between the City of El Paso and Flock Group Inc., doing business under the name Flock Safety."

Please be advised that I have been informed that there are no responsive documents pertaining to your request. As no responsive documents have been located, there is no charge associated with this response and your request is now considered closed.

Please reach out to the City Attorney's Office for any information regarding what you are looking for as the El Paso Police Department does not have any responsive information."

There's very little I can say to defend that to someone. The agreement obviously exists. I have seen it. It was shown to me by the Police Department. How can I possibly explain to someone that received that response? Is that information now being made public? I understand that that might be available moving forward, Ms. Mack.

City Manager Dionne Mack: Yes sir, we will make it available on the website.

Senior Assistant City Attorney, Eric Gutierrez: That's correct, and Rep. Canales that was an administrative error from the police department. We've already reached out to that requester today and provided them the responsive records.

Representative Chris Canales: I understand, at what time today was that provided to them?

Senior Assistant City Attorney, Eric Gutierrez: It was about I want to say like two hours ago.

Representative Chris Canales: So, they've had two hours. They couldn't sign up to speak at this meeting with that information, and I just I think that's a big oversight you know that we're being asked to vote on something, the public is being asked to provide their input and yet they weren't provided with the information requested.

Senior Assistant City Attorney, Eric Gutierrez: Correct it will be on the FAQ site from now on and so we're going to have our staff put it up there so if anyone wanted it, they wouldn't have to request it. It would be on the website.

Representative Chris Canales: I understand, but again, it's beyond the deadline for them to sign up to speak at this meeting having that information.

To that end there are some members of the public who signed up to speak this morning and some of them did speak this morning they now have access to this additional information since we just learned this afternoon that there will be no additional vote in May or June time frame on the agreement. I think it'd be fair to allow them to speak on this issue having the new information. With that, I'd move to suspend the rules to allow for additional public comment on this item.

Representative Chris Canales: Are there any other ALPR vendors available on any of the buyboards or through any of the purchasing collaboratives that we are part of?

EPPD Chief, Peter Pacillas: I would have to research that or defer to the purchasing department.

Representative Chris Canales: So, we were able to procure the contract with Flock through a buyboard. It's very possible that there could be another vendor also available through a different.

EPPD Chief, Peter Pacillas: Yes sir.

Representative Chris Canales: I promise I ask only to understand I don't mean any disrespect. Assistant Chief Talamantes earlier said there was no way that we would have agreed to the updated terms that we didn't receive those from Flock. I was sent those by Ms. Mack today. I read from them verbatim from what I received from her by email, either one of those is true or the other is true. They can't both be true. I think that what I read is our current terms and conditions within the agreement with Flock.

EPPD Chief, Peter Pacillas: So, my understanding is the agreement that we got into under the current contract, those are the provisions of the contract and those can't be altered. I'd have to defer back to legal. Even though it was on a buyboard, my understanding is that was a when we got on the buyboard, those were the terms and conditions.

Representative Chris Canales: And those have not shifted since the start of the agreement or they have because what's posted on Flock's website and again what I received from the city manager today seemed to indicate that those were the current terms and conditions, the altered ones.

EPPD Chief, Peter Pacillas: Yes, we were not made aware, but what I'll defer to legal, but under the terms and condition that we agreed to under the buyboard that we went.

Senior Assistant City Attorney, Eric Gutierrez: That's exactly what my understanding is as well based on what PD purchased through the buyboard is the terms and conditions that exist today.

Representative Chris Canales: So, the updated terms and conditions are not effective.

Senior Assistant City Attorney, Eric Gutierrez: If there's updated terms and conditions, they would have been sent to PD for their review. I don't know if that's happened.

Representative Chris Canales: Okay. So those are not in effect right now.

Senior Assistant City Attorney, Eric Gutierrez: My understanding is the original terms and conditions when we initially purchased through the buyboard are what we have as the contract and the terms and conditions that are there are what we are currently working with.

Representative Chris Canales: Then I I'm having trouble then understanding what information to rely on if I'm being sent other terms and conditions. It just adds so much confusion if we don't know if we have terms and conditions that say they're able to disclose our data or they're not, that that's a huge red flag for whether or not we're approving a contract with them. Regardless if we enter into a new agreement or renew the agreement, have we seen already what those the new terms and conditions in the new agreement would look like?

EPPD Chief, Peter Pacillas: That would be during the whole fact finding in that we would turn that contract, terms and conditions over to legal for review and if we don't agree to things we would ask our legal department to argue on our behalf for a contract that we accept with whatever vendor.

Representative Chris Canales: Would we accept the contract if it included the language that Flock was allowed to disclose our data?

EPPD Chief, Peter Pacillas: No. And that that was one of the things that we've been we've been saying over and over again. That's why we are under the uh current Flock contract where we control all our data and all our information.

Representative Chris Canales: Okay, because in the new terms and conditions that are made available through Flock's website, that is in their updated terms and conditions. I anticipate that's what they would expect us to agree to in order to continue to use their system.

EPPD Chief, Peter Pacillas: Yes. But that that's where we would turn it over to our attorneys to fight on our behalf for our terms and conditions to be in there.

Representative Chris Canales: Right. I'm just I guess I'm looking for some sort of assurance that if Flock was not willing to remove that from their terms and conditions in what they agree with us that we would not look to pursue that agreement if they were allowed to disclose our data.

EPPD Chief, Peter Pacillas: Right, and that's where we want to control our information. Once again, that's where we get our legal department to argue on our behalf for a contract that's acceptable to us.

Representative Chris Canales: Okay. I think Miss Neman has a comment.

City Attorney Karla Neiman: So unilateral modifications by the other party are not binding on the city. If there were changes made by Flock that we didn't agree to, we are not bound by those terms. My understanding is that today's agreement hasn't been signed and there's been amendments that we haven't reviewed. What you are all relying on is a prior contract that is currently in place. So, whatever modifications you all are relying on, and I'm not clear what you're reading from, if it's the terms of the contract that was provided to the council a couple of weeks ago or the new terms or conditions. That's what I'm not clear on.

Representative Chris Canales: I was sent a terms and conditions document today by the city manager.

City Attorney Karla Neiman: It's the same contract that we've had in effect that is that expires in May.

Representative Chris Canales: It reads updated on February 28th, 2026 at the very top.

City Attorney Karla Neiman: So, if the city of El Paso didn't agree to those terms and conditions, we are not bound by them. We signed an agreement last year, so whatever Flock decides to change would have had to have been approved by the city.

Representative Chris Canales: What we were told earlier was that because it's through the byboard that the buyboard accepted the change to the terms and conditions. Is that not the case?

City Attorney Karla Neiman: But we don't agree to unilateral modifications per the terms of the agreement. So, another party can't change a contract unilaterally. Hence, it's not a contract. A contract is a binding agreement between two parties. The other side doesn't just get to change the agreement because they want to.

Representative Chris Canales: What I understand is that we have something that more closely resembles a use a license and use agreement that we don't own. It's not a contract for the purchase of. We are agreeing to their terms to license the the software and the hardware. They're not able to update their terms of service for a user agreement?

City Attorney Karla Neiman: Not traditionally because we would have to agree to those. I don't know whether the terms or agreements were reviewed by IT and there were issues that they waved off on. I would defer to them, but traditionally under Texas law we don't allow unilateral changes in contracts.

Representative Chris Canales: Okay, and like I said, I guess I'm just looking for assurance that if those if the new terms and conditions that Flock provides publicly that they say are the terms and conditions for their users, if those hold, if those are the case, then again, we wouldn't be okay with entering into further agreement with Flock if they disclose our data to others. If they reserve that right in their new terms of service,

City Attorney Karla Neiman: If they reserve what right?

Representative Chris Canales: The right to disclose customer data to others. That is what it reads in their current terms of service.

City Attorney Karla Neiman: Correct. But those changes would have to be approved by the council. If they're coming forward, we would have to say this has been approved by the governing body. That contract is not coming forward at this moment. We're going to go out and apply for a grant. The contract will come back. I think that what you all are recommending.

Representative Chris Canales: That's not what we're being told. The contract will be executed administratively is what we've been told

City Attorney Karla Neiman: Correct, but I think that in order to get to what you are seeking is what I'm hearing is that you want us to enter into an agreement with specific provisions that prohibit Flock from doing certain things.

Representative Chris Canales: Not necessarily. I don't want us to enter into an agreement if Flock says that we have to abide by those terms.

City Attorney Karla Neiman: Okay.

Representative Chris Canales: Again, that they're the terms of service that I was sent and the terms and conditions of Flock service that I was sent today.

City Attorney Karla Neiman: Right, and traditionally we vet them from a legal perspective but then their security protocols we also rely on IT. So, we rely on their expertise and then PD's needs for the software. So, they're the subject matter experts in terms of what the system would need what they need for the system.

Representative Chris Canales: I can understand that. I just think that whether or not we disclose our own user data and whether we allow one of our vendors to disclose our what is essentially our proprietary data is a policy decision that I would hope would come from the council. I'm just trying to seek assurances that we don't want to, you know, that people are in agreement that if Flock requires us to agree to that language that's in their terms and conditions, that that's not something that we would do. Either we would look to negotiate a change to that or we wouldn't proceed if they held firm to that. That's all I'm looking for. I think it's a massive change to go from Flock does not disclose uh any user information to Flock reserves a perpetual non-revocable right to use and disclose our customer data. It's a huge change in their policy and it is I mean, you know, documented for the public on their website. I am just concerned that there's still some confusion about whether or not these apply now or not and then whether or not they would apply in a future agreement if the grant is awarded and we look to enter into that future agreement.

City Attorney Karla Neiman: So, let me clarify for you. We would need to look at the terms of the contract as presented at the time that we're going to enter into the contract. So today, respectfully, you're talking theory and analytics in terms of what was said before. They could change the terms and conditions tomorrow if you approve the contract and we're looking at another set of documents. Again, the terms and conditions that you're relying on were in February. The city didn't agree to those unilaterally when we entered into the agreement the prior year. What I'm hearing from you is your policy recommendation is you would rather us not enter into an agreement with a vendor that does the things that you don't agree with. Those are policy considerations for the council.

Today, we don't have a contract that we can tell you these are going to be the terms and conditions that's going to come forward in the future.

Representative Chris Canales: I understand. I'll close by saying the council doesn't have any future opportunity to weigh in on this policy decision. All I'm trying to get is some assurance that that there's agreement that that would be a bad terms for the city. Chief Talamantes said it earlier like we wouldn't, we didn't receive that, we wouldn't agree to that. I hope that that holds. Okay, I'll leave it at that. Mayor, thank you.

Transcript of Rep. Canales's Comments on Item 62

So, I want to hold up this flyer first. Let's see if people can see it. It reads, "Caution, your water may be contaminated. Call us immediately." It has a phone number; you may have guessed the phone number is not a real one. But this particular leaflet is a generic one that I made. Other than that phone number, every element on that flyer is one that has appeared on a real advertisement here in El Paso. And actually, that's just limited to the ones that I've gotten on my own door. Some of them also show a generic water droplet logo that looks very similar to El Paso Water's logo or very often elements that look a lot like the City logo. This is one of those issues that sounds really small until you talk to people about it and then you realize how widespread of a problem it is and how much harm it's caused to a lot of El Pasoans.

A lot of people have seen door hangers or materials about their water that look a lot like this one and seemingly tens of thousands of them have been distributed in neighborhoods across the city, really annually. This has been going on for several years now. They look really official; they're formatted to look like official service notices or safety notices about your water. They use the same kind of language that you'd expect from the City or the County government or El Paso Water. The people distributing these, often wear blue vests or yellow safety vests and often blue hats resembling the uniform of the water utility employees. In fact, I got an email at 8:45 this morning who saw that from someone who saw that the council would be considering this today and they sent me a photo of somebody distributing one of these to their front door. So, they are out today distributing these types of solicitations. And of course, you know, these are not official notices.

They're ads. They want you to call a number often to schedule a test of your water quality that inevitably will tell you that you need to buy a filter system or some other expensive intervention from them. Often those cost upwards of four or five or $6,000.

So that's the crux of the problem. When something looks official like this, people treat it as something official. They assume that the information on it is accurate. They take it seriously.

They invite someone into their house. They call the number, they schedule the test, and in some cases, they end up spending a lot of money on something that they don't really need based on the perceived legitimacy of what landed on their doorstep.

I think when a lot of us see these leaflets, we know that they're not real advertisements. We've seen them again and again. We understand, but some people don't, and it's not their fault. Seniors and other vulnerable residents may not have the tools they need to research these companies or evaluate the claims they make about their water, and bad actors can prey on that fear in order to make sales. And I don't think that's right. So, I guess to be clear, there's nothing wrong with offering water testing or filtration services or anything like that. Businesses in El Paso can do that. But, that's not what this is about. This is about the gray area between advertising and impersonation and between, you know, offering your services as a business and deceiving the public with something like these leaflets that are misleading marketing. So, I think that creates two problems. One, as I mentioned, people can end up spending their hard-earned money on something that they don't need based on claims that were untrue about their water quality. And second, just as important, it chips away at the trust in official communications.

You know, my constituents often receive these on their doors and they call me asking if they're legitimate. If residents start second-guessing whether something is really from the City or from the utility, it makes it harder for us when we have to communicate something when it actually matters, when there's actually some sort of issue with your water. So, I think the approach in what I've proposed is pretty straightforward.

I'm not proposing to ban anything. We're not getting into the business of deciding which services people can offer. We're not regulating water quality. That's handled at the state level by the Texas Commission on Environmental Quality. We're just saying you have to be clear when you advertise. If it's an advertisement, you have to print on there that it's an advertisement. You have to say that you're not affiliated with a government agency or a public utility. You have to put your name and your real contact information on the ad so that people know who they're dealing with and know how to reach you. And that's essentially it.

On enforcement, I've tried to keep it practical as well. The goal is compliance first. The intent is that you'll get provided notice and an opportunity to fix it first and then escalation from there only as necessary with stronger penalties if you're a repeat or intentional violator. If you want to sell something, that's totally fine. We just want to make sure that it doesn't look like it came from someone else, that it doesn't look like it came from the government or from the utility. To me I think that's pretty basic consumer protection and I think it's a reasonable standard for us to set for you know what people can expect from the people who come to their door providing them information about their water. So, with that council I ask for your support and you know I'm happy to yield to any questions as well if anyone has any questions about what's being proposed.
